IN 58 DAYS A '58 PLYMOUTH RAN 58,000 MILES—EQUAL TO
MORE THAN TWICE AROUND THE WORLD
AND IT DROVE EVERY INCH OF THE WAY!

We knew this car was tough.

We designed it that way.

That's why we weren't afraid to give Plymouth the toughest test run of all time . . . with all America as the "track."

We didn't coddle this Plymouth. Didn't crate it and ship it carefully from place to place. Instead, we aimed it out of Los Angeles one misty morning and sent it through a course that ran 58,000 miles through 37 states.

The time limit? Only 58 days.

A thousand miles a day!

The equivalent of 6 years' driving crammed into little more than 8 weeks!

Three times this Plymouth crossed the Rockies. Three times it wound its way up and down across the country . . . passing through more than 1200 cities and towns. Whipping over turnpikes . . . creeping through city traffic . . . arrowing down super-highways . . . feeling its way through 500 miles of rutted detours. And when the drivers turned the key to end the marathon, it still looked, ran and rode like new.

This is what lasting value really means. The ability to take everything that American roads and weather can dish out—and come up grinning. Why don't you give Plymouth a test drive yourself—today? You'll see what we mean.

That's the Plymouth "track" . . . and just look at that route! Every possible road and weather condition. Plymouth ran every inch of that murderous route 3 times in just 58 days. What greater proof of lasting, built-in stamina!

Star of the Forward Look . . . Plymouth ahead for keeps!

INCREASED FOREIGN COMPETITION; FEWER EXPORTS PREDICTED

Increased competition from foreign producers, and substantially lower exports of agricultural products, is predicted for the year ahead, says M. C. Conner, agricultural economist at VPI.

Many countries, he points out, have regained their ability to produce a substantial part of their needs. Agricultural production in Western Europe, to which 40% of United States agricultural exports have been going, is now 25% above pre-war and is steadily expanding. This means a lessening demand for U. S. exports in that area.

The factors adding up to the prediction of fewer exports are: rising productivity of foreign producers; a lull in the industrial boom in foreign countries; reduced amounts of gold and dollars held by foreign countries with which to buy U. S. products; and the tendency for countries losing gold and dollar reserves to impose restrictions on dollar purchases and of a type that usually hit agricultural products first.

Conner says trade between countries is a two-way exchange. "Many fail to recognize this and insist on tariffs and quotas to prevent imports while trying to keep exports high. The only way this can be done is by making large loans to foreign countries. The U. S. has been doing this — If it ever expects to be paid back, more products will have to be imported."

Agricultural exports reached an all-time high in 1957, under the agricultural stimulus of the Department of Agriculture's export drive to reduce the government's inventory of surplus commodities. "These foreign outlets have served as an important cushion against the full impact of our expanded production since the war," Conner says.

Exports take a large proportion of many commodities: for example, about 30% or more of the U. S. wheat crop, 25 to 30% of the cotton, 25% of the tobacco, 20% of the lard, and 50% of the rice. "Certainly these commodities would have been in much greater difficulties had it not been for foreign countries," Conner says.

Appomattox is a growing town.

Scientists dispute the contention that retirement hastens death.
